

CIS

Communication and Information Sciences Interdisciplinary PhD Program

The Communication and Information Sciences (CIS) Ph.D. program at the University of Hawai'i is a collaborative effort of the School of Communications, the Department of Information and Computer Sciences, the Department of Information Technology Management, and the Library and Information Science Program.

The CIS Program produces leaders in the nexus of technology and society with expertise that transcends the individual disciplines and their underlying technologies.

Focus areas:

- Biomedical Informatics
- Communication and Information Theories
- Communication Policy and Planning
- Data Communications
- Human-Computer Interaction
- Information Storage and Retrieval
- Management Information Systems
- Organizational Communication

Application Deadlines

Non U.S. Residents                      January 15th
Recommended for residents requesting financial aid

U.S. Residents                              March 1st

www.hawaii.edu/cis

