7. Articulation Meetings
Tom Hilgers, GEO

In the past two months, I have been to several meetings on articulation, including two meetings of the reconstituted University Council on Articulation. Joining me at many of the meetings has been Carolyn Brooks-Harris, who just completed a 3-year term on GEC. Other meetings have included Linda Cox, Jan Heu, Mary Tiles, Neal Smatresk, and Kelly Aune.

Our general sense is that we need to refocus efforts in order to achieve truly transparent transfer policies at UH. What makes a student’s use of system educational opportunities most efficient in progress toward a bachelor’s degree? Our answer: a student’s understanding the consequences of today’s course choices on meeting tomorrow’s requirements in a major. Helping students to see those consequences will, we think, be the most useful way of achieving transparency.

Most UHM participants in the current effort have hands-on experience with GEC policies and GEC policy-making roles. We will continue to consult with GEC as we work for solid articulation policy and practice.
