Co-Facilitators on Molokai: Lori Gomez and Alison Place

Participating teachers will read and discuss professional literature, write and participate in peer groups, observe, teach, and discuss demonstration lessons, and select a follow-up inquiry to pursue in their own classrooms.

HWP Invitational Summer Institutes revolve around these key features:

- examining current theory and research on the teaching of writing;
- writing ourselves and possibly reconnecting with our own writing processes;
- teaching, as well as responding, to each other.

The Invitational Summer Institute has power; it changes people, making good teachers even better. Please consider joining us this summer, and bring a friend or a colleague to share your experience.

Teachers can earn DOE professional development credits or 6 graduate credits (EDCS 604) through Outreach College at UHM.

$124 is a College Administrative Fee for graduate students. It does not include graduate tuition at UHM. Some graduate tuition support is available from HWP for teachers enrolled in a graduate program in Curriculum Studies at UHM-COE.*

If you have any questions about the institute, please contact Rhonda Nowak, HWP Director, at rnowak@hawaii.edu or 808-956-5359.
