News

The CIG Coordinator will customize the News feature by putting in a web address for an RSS news feed. RSS is a data format that is used to syndicate news on the web. It allows users to view continuously updated content from a news site in another website. Sites that distribute news in RSS format are called "news feeds." In addition to news, some websites use the RSS format for information that is updated often, such as blogs (web logs that serve as publicly accessible personal journals), events listings, or the revision history of a book.
