FALL, 2013
BUS 345 O & E: STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT

Course Description:

CONTENT:
BUS 345 is the CBA capstone core course that focuses on the strategic management of firms, emphasizing business in the Asia Pacific region. It deals with the function and responsibilities of a general manager and is designed to train students to be able to make strategic corporate decisions in an analytical and integrative way. This is an integrative course in two respects. First, the course takes the perspective of the firm as a whole and examines how policies in each functional area can be integrated into an overall company strategy. Second, it takes a broad view of the environment that includes the customers, technology, economics, capital markets, competitors, special interest groups, and government entities. Thus, it draws together ideas from other functional/discipline based courses. A major objective of this course is to present a body of analytical tools for strategic decision making, taking into account various critical considerations.

The field of strategic management explores how firms achieve competitive advantage in the context of single and multi-business firms. The single-business firm must leverage its distinctive strengths to exploit industry opportunities. Similarly, the multi-business firm must increase the competitive position of each business unit in order to add value. Accordingly, we will explore what managers do to create value in and across businesses. In addition, we will consider the role of alliances, acquisitions, and divestitures, as they comprise an increasingly significant component of strategy.
Key tasks of the general manager that are emphasized in the course include:

Formulating strategy to achieve a sustainable competitive advantage,
1. Managing diversification and growth,
2. Allocating resources strategically,
3. Coping with multiple stakeholders,
4. Designing dynamic organizations and decision-making processes, and
5. Creating value in a global context.

We start at the business level and examine the challenges of managing a firm competing in a single industry. An integral part of this study is an exploration of the environment, resources, and capabilities underlying strategy and how they may be leveraged across varying settings and situations. In most large- and medium-sized firms, corporate strategy is different from business strategy because of the multiplicity of businesses in which the firm is involved. We explore the differences between corporate- and business-level (or divisional-level) strategies and the requirements each places on managers at different levels in the firm.

Most of the courses you have taken at Shidler thus far deal with how to excel in functional areas, such as accounting, economics, finance, human resources, information systems, marketing, or operations management. Employers expect graduates to have such functional expertise. However, employers also want graduates to understand the “big picture.” Therefore, the overarching perspective in this course is that of the general manager with regard to the health of the entire firm or a multi-market or multi-product division.

Functional specialists will benefit from the general management perspective developed in this course even though they may not be (or even want to be) general managers. The basis of strategy is that every function’s actions should be coordinated with the overall needs of the business. In fact, functional specialists are the people on whom general managers can be subject to sub-optimizing pressure, they too need to understand the general manager’s perspective.

Learning Goals & Course Objectives

The main content objectives for the course:
-This is an oral focus course and a main objective will be to enhance your oral communication ability.
This is an Ethics focus course and a main objective will be to enhance your thinking and decision analysis of ethical issues in business.
-Develop and reinforce a general management perspective that integrates concepts across functional areas.
-Provide framework and tools for strategic analysis.
-Understand the implications of strategy for the internal organization.
-Understand the implications of the global environment for strategy.
-Meet a UHM graduation requirement.
Required Reading

The textbook for this course is a custom designed version of Strategic Management: Concepts and Cases by Frank T. Rothaermel, published by McGraw-Hill, 2013.
You may purchase either the e-book or the loose-leaf print version of the custom text. Instructions for purchase may be found as an email attachment at the end of this syllabus.

Student Preparation

For the learning process to be really effective, it is necessary that you carefully prepare the cases/readings before class and actively participate in the case discussions during the class, and in your teams. Students are expected to be fully prepared for each class.

Student Information Sheet

The purpose of this form is to help me get to know who you are. Please complete the form below, detach it, and return it to the Professor by the third class session. There is a 5 point penalty for not returning the SIS with photo by the third class meeting.

Attendance

Because 345"O"&"E" is a case-oriented course relying on class participation for its success, attendance at every class is considered extremely important. However, health issues are also very important. If you are seriously ill, it may be wise for you to get medical attention early-on and to follow your doctor’s advise, including staying home to rest and get better if that is best for your well-being.

NOTE: The case presentations by teams require the teams to meet outside of class time. We understand how difficult it may be for all team members to be present at such meetings. From time to time during the semester, class time at the end of a session will be made available for team meetings. Be sure to use this time effectively, as full participation of all team members is important for the success of team presentations.
Disability Access

Students with disabilities are encouraged to contact the KOKUA program for information and services. Services are confidential and students are not charged.

ORAL & ETHICS FOCUS:

Bus 345'O'' & 'E' is an Oral Communication focus Course:
Oral communication skills benefit students academically, interpersonally, and in their future careers. Students who participate in class discussions are more involved in their own learning. Students who can express themselves will find it easier to give oral presentations in class as well as to interact with their instructors and with other students. Employers seek applicants who have excellent oral communication skills.

Because UHM believes that its students should be prepared to use oral communication skills in a variety of contexts, including public presentations and group and interpersonal interactions, an O course is required for graduation.
Each student will offer three oral presentations to the class during the semester. Oral presentations are video taped and we review their playback in order to enhance student feedback of their oral presentation skills. Individual and/or group feedback will be provided.

Bus 345'O''7'E' is an Ethics Focus Course:
In preceding core courses (Bus 311,312,313,314 & 315) you have covered ethics topics which coupled with the ethics coverage in this course leads to the E designation. In other words, Ethics has been integrated across the core and this course is the one that carries the ethics designation.

Team Presentations

The class will be formed into three teams. These teams will work together for the entire semester. Each team will make three Oral Presentations; two of these will be based upon cases from the text, the third presentation will be based upon the teams research at a local company chosen by the team.

Exam:
There will be one in-class midterm. The midterm exam will be a multiple-choice exam covering all text chapters.

Final Term Paper:
There will be a final term paper, the topic of which will be explained in class.
Grading

30%  Oral Team Case Presentations: Oral case analysis presentation will be evaluated each of three times during the semester. Each presentation will be worth 10% of the grade:

15%  Ethics Focus: Student analysis of ethical issues in business during the case studies presentations is evaluated in terms of rigor of ethical decision taking. Each text case oral presentation will contain an ethics discussion.

30%  Midterm-Exam....Multiple choice questions on all chapters

15%  Final  Term Paper

10%  Student participation in class and in group preparation

The above percentage allocations are approximations given to act as guidance. They are not a rigid fixed formula. The Professor reserves the right to use his judgment in the final determination of grades.

How to TAKE NOTES within the eBook download (VitalSource Bookshelf)

Design is a process, not an art. But the steps in that process are easily understood. This chapter and the next two explore the process of creating a lighting design by investigating three concepts: the design process, the image of light, and the lighting key.

However, before you learn these concepts, you need to fully understand their purpose. Visualize it as a road map. These directions to your destination may be circuitous and not always perfectly planned. Just as a well trained driver may be able to find a way around a road block, so would you if you have learned the process and developed a well worked out mental map. Why? Because an untrained mind will wind up following the roadblocks and detours.
