Dear University Of Hawai'i,

Recently in the past week it has come to my attention that many Hawaiians from all islands have been protesting from both angles of the situation. The purpose is to voice my opinion with some evidence. My name is Ethan Lee, I have to say that I think the TMT is a good solution.

I think that the Hawaiian people are really people smart people. An example of this could be navigation. I believe that our ancestors were smart to study the stars and with no idea where they were going sail to Hawai'i to get away from Tahiti. When I think of ancestors I think they would say that it would be good for the Thirty Meter Telescope (TMT) to be built because they would only want the knowledge for the Hawaiians to be the greatest it could ever be. If the Hawaiian people were stupid then they would have gotten here by mystery. But according to the Hokulea and the Navigation crew, they discovered that the Hawaiians had thought that they would get to a better place.

I think the opportunity to say that we want to learn more is now because if we say no then we may not ever have opportunities like this one. I also think that if you told Hawai'i what I just explained in this letter, people would learn and voice their own personal opinion instead of saying no since they have peer pressure from almost all Hawaiians. I feel more toward the TMT to be built.

Sincerely,

Resident Of Hawai'i
