

Pacific Center for Emerging Infectious Diseases
Research

UNIVERSITY of HAWAII
MĀNOA

COBRE RESEARCH SEMINAR SERIES

Healthy People, Healthy Plants: Book Publishing that Supports International Development

Rachel Cutts

*Commissioning Editor
CAB International
Wallingford, Oxfordshire*

Rachel Cutts, who has been at CABI since 2006 and the Commissioning Editor since 2010, publishes books aimed at students, practitioners and researchers. She is visiting the university to meet academics and to discuss information needs, research trends, and develop new book ideas.

CABI publishes academic books and databases in the life sciences, including infectious diseases, parasitology, microbiology, public health, global health and human nutrition. Being not-for-profit, their publishing funds projects in developing countries that tackle crop pests and other threats to food security. This talk will provide insights into CABI's growing book programme, as well as provide information for prospective authors and anyone wanting to know more about academic book publishing.

Thursday, August 11, 2011 at 10:00 a.m.
John A. Burns School of Medicine, Kaka'ako
Medical Education Building Auditorium, Room 315
For further information, call 692-1654

The Center and its activities are supported by a grant (P20RR018727) from the National Center for Research Resources, National Institutes of Health.

