

Philosophy Department Colloquium Presents

PING ZHANG

Department of East Asian Studies, Tel Aviv University

Friday – March 6, 2015 at 1:30 PM
Sakamaki Hall C-308

“TORAH VS. DAO: A Comparative Reading of the First Chapters of Pirki Avoth and the Analects”

This lecture attempts to demonstrate the possibility of establishing an inter-traditional dialogue between the two traditions of Confucianism and Rabbinic Judaism. By using a method based on Martin Buber’s theory, our comparative reading discusses the common ground of the two traditions on which such a dialogue might be conducted, as well as the significant differences between them.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

For disability access information, please call 956-8649.

