Join us as Dr. John H. Falk, a leader in visitor studies and an expert in free-choice learning, explores one of the most fundamental questions facing the museum profession - why do people visit museums? Using the lens of personal well-being and drawing from past and current research, Falk offers a “visitor’s eye view” of how the public uses their visits as vehicles for fulfilling their own personal needs and aspirations.

Sessions to be followed by Q&A.

Sponsored by a generous grant from the Hawai‘i Tourism Authority’s Kukula Ola Living Hawaiian Culture program and co-sponsored by the UH Museum Studies Graduate Certificate Program, Bishop Museum, and the Hawai‘i Museums Association
