Listen to a podcast of inspirational personal stories, in their own voices, from the Center for Oral History archive, about the struggle to escape a massive deadly tidal wave and live to pick up the pieces of broken houses and shattered communities. Discuss connections to contemporary scenarios and derive lessons about how to respond within 15 minutes to Hawai'i-generated tsunamis.

This project is supported by a grant from the Hawai'i Council for the Humanities and partnership with Hawai'i Public Radio.
