

The University of Hawaii at Manoa, Department of Speech, invites applications for 3 full-time, 9-month Assistant Professor positions to begin August 1, 2008, pending position clearance and availability of funds.

1. Tenure-Track Assistant Professor: Position Number 82237. Duties: Teach instructional load according to departmental needs and those in the candidate's specialty, serve on and direct graduate committees, produce quantitative research leading to refereed publications, assume normal committee responsibilities and other duties as assigned by the Department Chair. Minimum Qualifications: Ph.D. in Communication or closely related discipline (ABD will be considered); research program demonstrating theory-based quantitative approach to the study of human communication; research program in the area of persuasion/social influence; demonstrated ability to produce publishable quality quantitative research; university teaching experience in persuasion or social influence. Desirable Qualifications: Advanced training in quantitative research methodology; experience in obtaining extramural funding. The ideal candidate will demonstrate high scholarly potential, high quality teaching, and a record of participation in service activities. Salary: Salary commensurate with qualifications and experience. To Apply: Send letter of application clearly indicating the job position number, current vita, evidence of research and teaching effectiveness, academic transcripts (copies acceptable but official transcripts required at time of hire), and have three letters of reference sent to: Dr. Devan Rosen, Search Committee Chair, Department of Speech, University of Hawaii at Manoa, 2560 Campus Road, George Hall 326, Honolulu, HI 96822. Continuous Recruitment: Review of applications will begin on December 20, 2007 and will continue until the position is filled. Inquiries: Phone (808) 956-8911, e-mail: rosend@hawaii.edu.
2. Temporary non-tenure track Assistant Professor (Generalist): Position Number 82335T. Duties: Teach core courses in Persuasion and/or Research Methods and/or Theories in Communication; teach various upper division or graduate classes as needed, and contribute to the scholarly and service activities of the department and other duties as assigned by the Department Chair. Minimum Qualifications: Ph.D. in Communication or closely related discipline (ABD will be considered); university teaching experience in message processing, persuasion/social influence, and/or interpersonal communication courses; qualified to teach undergraduate-level core communication courses. Desirable Qualifications: Advanced training in quantitative research methodology, and evidence of an active research program in communication. The ideal candidate will demonstrate high scholarly potential, high quality teaching, and willingness to participate in service activities. Salary: Salary commensurate with qualifications and experience. To Apply: Send letter of application clearly indicating the job position number, current vita, evidence of research and teaching effectiveness, academic transcripts (copies acceptable but official transcripts required at time of hire), and have three letters of reference sent to: Dr. Devan Rosen, Search Committee Chair, Department of Speech, University of Hawaii at Manoa, 2560 Campus Road, George Hall 326, Honolulu, HI 96822. Continuous Recruitment: Review of applications will begin on December 20, 2007 and will continue until the position is filled. Inquiries: Phone (808) 956-8911, e-mail: rosend@hawaii.edu.

3. Temporary non-tenure track Assistant Professor (Course Director): Position Number 82310T. Duties: Direct graduate teaching assistants and teach the mass lecture for a multi-section Public Speaking course; teach various upper-division undergraduate courses serving departmental needs. Assume normal committee responsibilities and other duties as assigned by the Department Chair. Minimum Qualifications: Ph.D. in Communication or closely related discipline (ABD will be considered); university teaching experience in message processing, persuasion/social influence, and/or interpersonal communication courses; qualified to teach undergraduate-level core communication course. Desirable Qualifications: Advanced training in quantitative research methodology; university teaching experience in instructional communication courses; and evidence of an active research program in communication. The ideal candidate will demonstrate high scholarly potential, high quality teaching, and willingness to participate in service activities. Salary: Salary commensurate with qualifications and experience. To Apply: Send letter of application clearly indicating the job position number, current vita, evidence of research and teaching effectiveness, academic transcripts (copies acceptable but official transcripts required at time of hire), and have three letters of reference sent to: Dr. Devan Rosen, Search Committee Chair, Department of Speech, University of Hawaii at Manoa, 2560 Campus Road, George Hall 326, Honolulu, HI 96822. Continuous Recruitment: Review of applications will begin on December 20, 2007 and will continue until the position is filled. Inquiries: Phone (808) 956-8911, e-mail: rosend@hawaii.edu.

The University of Hawaii at Manoa is the major research institution in the State of Hawaii's ten-campus system of higher education. The University's Manoa Valley campus is located in the city of Honolulu on the island of Oahu. The Department of Speech offers Bachelor and Master degrees. The Department web site is: www.hawaii.edu/speech.

The University of Hawaii is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Institution.