Aloha mai kaua.
Thank you for visiting this site. The enduring commitment of my research/scholarship and instruction is to enhance the conditions that promote social justice and health equity for all people, with particular emphasis on Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders. Disparate mortality and survival outcomes are persistently observed among ethnic minority and indigenous peoples, especially as race/ethnicity intersect with low socioeconomic status, residency in medically under-resourced communities, sexual minority and other stigmatized statuses, and culturally diverse beliefs that potentially disable participation in conventional Western programs of health promotion, disease prevention, and treatment. I believe that participatory education and community-based participatory research is vital to promote health for all---my efforts reflect this belief. For more information, please read on.

Selected Publications
Journal Articles
http://www.tandfonline.com/eprint/GEGhSYxFMUpKe8IifuZD/full

Books
Book Chapters

Reports
Note: Findings from this technical report, as well as results from two other study arms will be published as The Disparate Treatment of Native Hawaiians in the Criminal Justice System (Honolulu, HI: OHA, October 2010).