Matters of the Heart

Law, Ethics, Medicine, Autonomy
Deactivating Pacemakers

Cardiovascular Implantable Electronic Devices or pacemakers regulate the heart's rhythm and save and extend lives. But there may come a time when persons nearing the end of life want it deactivated. Is there is a consistent healthcare standard in end of life care regarding deactivation of pacemakers? What are the medical, legal and ethical guidelines to better support the autonomy and independence of patients with respect to CIEDs, including pacemakers?

Seek answers to medical, legal and ethical issues that will better support the autonomy and independence of patients with respect to Cardiovascular Implantable Electronic Devices, including pacemakers.

1:30pm - 3:00pm
