$15 Watch Brings Complaint About Smith Street Cop

BY STAFF WRITER

What is the true story of Officer David Smith's watch? According to the Police Department, the watch must be returned to the collector of a plant that was damaged by the same officer. However, the collector has not been located.

Mr. Smith, who is a fine young man with good character, was given a watch. When he went to sell it, he gave away his wife bought it instead.

Both versions are in accord on one fact—that Smith has no love for his watch.

Dr. Smith says he bought the watch for $15. He says it cost him $15 and a watch is worth $15. Smith's watch, a fine silver, is worth $15. It was given to him by his wife.

Oil Monopolies

Protests over 10 years ago oil corporations have been involved almost constantly in investigations or court actions concerning violations of the anti-trust laws. The times they have been actually in court and being drawn into the net to face the Justice Department anti-trust functions as having only nuisance value.

JAPANESE EXPORTS

Britain took the actions as Japan crossed into the field of international trade and gave competition. British textile producers were most unhappy about the comestecies of Japanese manufacturers.

DURING THE last fiscal year Japan exported $800,000,000, the highest amount so far, as officials estimated. The total export reached $500,000,000, an increase of $180,000,000 over the 1954-55 fiscal year. Official estimate for 1956-57 is $700,000,000.

Japanese exporters marked and searched for them as did other nations, interested in Asian trade. England, Germany, Belgium and Italy were all trying to capture more of these exports. The result of all of this re-organization of the world market brought the price of cottons down to a level that was not expected. Political Sidelines

The dailies have been quiet about strong the beating that has been going on between the Territorial land department and the Hawaiian Homes Commission. The land department feels that the HHC is out to wreck properties under its jurisdiction. There is some disagree- ment between the two on the issue of reclamation of Act No. 89. As long ago, A. Leser, Macafee, and cinematographer M. A. Smith attempted to sell land at Waimea- bay to the Star-Advertiser, but the sale by appearing to the attorney gen- eral, claiming the land rightly belonged to them. The attorney general ruled in favor of the land department. A. Smith and the land-survey department can't see how the attorney general ruled in favor of the land department.

THE TWO DAILIES are like maidservants, wearing the red cloth before the door, and they are called by names that they charge like mad,” commented a group member in a Democratic organization. “The tape recorders have been used to get the names, and this is not fair, and I don’t think the people will put up with it,” he added. “How can we act like the Republicans?”

GARNER-AUSTIN, newcomer to the Democratic Party, said last week that the “Democrat habitu- ally has the worst habits of his prede- cessor’s for years. They would rather call each other than with Republicans.”

Commented an observer: “The Republican plant plans plant stokes in the Democratic Party to stir up interest. This is not interesting to find out from where the people are called to maintain political care.”

IT’S SAID that Samuel W. King is somnolent-minded and that if he becomes Territorial GOP chairman he’ll fight the public.

Longshoremen Strike Victory Celebrated on Mother's Day

Combining a single celebration of Mother's Day and their victory in the strike, 2,000 longshoremen met at the Valley Island Fish Market.

Longshoremen represented by Harry Iida, the union's president, said they were determined to win the strike.

Iida said, "We have fought long and hard for our rights, and we will not waver until we have won."

The strike began on April 16, and by May 3, the longshoremen had won a 28% increase in wages and other benefits.

HRDA Admits Defections Among Members; Starts Recruiting

By STAFF WRITER
Not all members of the Hawaii Restaurant Data Association are as grudging as the organization in their behalf, it was brought out at the informal “chit-chat” meeting held at Queen’s Surf evening of May 10.

The Hawaii Brewing Co. (Primor Beer) was the subject of discussion, as the debate has not been in favor of the association approval rating of the organization, but the beer evaluation was made in the “constructive” manner, which the organization has not been accused of in favor of the brewery.

Defections among members have occurred in the past, but the organization has not been successful in recruiting new members.

Other defectors include the meeting of the organization’s executive committee, which was held last week at the headquarters.

Labor Roundup

Speed-up Breaks Hawaii Peace

Sporadic outbreaks of job action and protests against company adherence to the crew law occurred on the Hawaii island last week when dozens of hundreds of workers at Kawaihae and Kawaihae plantations stayed away from their jobs.

Of standing nature, the Kawaihae dispute came to a head on Thursday when the company’s automobile refused to handle the crew who recently refused to use union labor to bail out the case of the mill.

The trouble at Kawaihae has its roots in the union members, who have been the subject of the crew law which makes it difficult for them to organize.

Although some job security issues were not written into any agreement, the industrial power groups have been given some power to organize and other technological improvements would result.

It will be recalled that the ILWU in past negotiations has made a large point of the fact that the company has been underpaid by the wage guarantees of the crew law.

Just exactly where the sporadic outbreaks will lead is not known, but the workers find that they are given some power to organize and other technological improvements would result.

The workers have pointed out that the union and the company have been able to organize and other technological improvements would result.

THE ILWU AND POLITICS

Now that the Democratic Party has been divided into the “right” and the “left” wings, the ILWU’s activities may be interpreted in terms of the “right” and the “left” wings, respectively.

While we do not pretend to write articles about the ILWU and politics, we feel it is interesting to analyze some of the activities of the various parties.

First—the so-called third party dream of the revolutionaries.

THE ILWU and the Communists

We wish to add to the literature and the party movement that the right and the left wings of the ILWU are equally as important.

In Honolulu, the so-called third party dream of the revolutionaries is something that has been in the air for the past few weeks.

There were no plans for elections from the Democratic Party.

The statement from the ILWU to the effect that the election should take place in politics, joining whatever party they should join, is something that the public must be made aware of.

In Honolulu, there was talk of an ILWU movement, naming Jack Ball, the labor leader, and Ernest Cava, a Hawaii labor leader, resigned from the Democratic Party according to that statement of the board.

The ILWU in Hawaii, referred to its statement in the effect that its members should take part in politics, joining whatever party they should join, is something that the public must be made aware of.

From our observations that union members are not entertaining such ideas at this time.

Pressure Charged

Four days after he was arrested, Carter, 31, came into the shop during his workday and asked for a watch. Mrs. Carter paid $15 for the watch, on which occasion he said he needed a bill of sale. The Carter's, 73, lives in one of the small city machine shops in this county.

"When I came back and he took the watch and said, 'I'll sell it,' I was in a hurry and I asked him if he could make a deal, and he said yes," says Carter. "I was mad anyway, so I said, 'You're going to sell it? Good.'"

Carter, who was discharged from the army some months ago, said he wanted to sell the watch and take it like a good sport, but he said that he would not pay for the watch.

LESSON FOR QUIRINO

From the Philippines on clear days one can see Formosa where Chiang Kai-shek is talking of making his last stand. For many is the call of Chiang’s retreat, and the gravy of a regime for its corruption, graft and bad government.

Close at hand in the Far East, the Filipinos are an antecedent of the government. A lesson can be drawn from this.

But from the Philippines we hear news of parallel developments, of prevalent corruption and graft in the Quirino government.

One national columnist this week predicted that the Philippine government will tumble shortly, and will be taken over by the Hukbahahongs. Numerous readers of the dailies this must have come as a surprise; and more so because the prediction is put in its sharpest form. To readers of the record it is news to learn of the deep-seated weaknesses of the Quirino government, for this week has time and again given us the actual situation in the Philippines.

We recall that not long ago the dailies ran accounts of Huk setbacks, dismissing them as bandits in the nuts.

Accounts from the Philippines say how support for the Hukbahahongs is increasing, and that people are starting to take up arms in defense of their autonomy.

It seems that bandits, carried out in the hills of Luzon or in the streets of Manila, are being driven from their homes and lives are being threatened.

And the Quirino government, because it is being termite-eaten by racketeers, is expected to crumble in the not too distant future.

While the government has lost favor with the populace, how is it that the Huk win greater following? Some may say that the Hukbahahongs are propagandists. We have heard that before. But in the long run the deciding factor is practical application of promises which are made. Without popular support the Hukbahahongs cannot survive as guerrilla units. They would be reduced to bandits for sheer existence, if the people hated and feared them.

The growth of the Huk in many ways parallels that of the Chinese Communists. It is not popular to say today that clean government and mass support were outstanding features of the Chinese guerrillas but here and now we do. The dailies have published these facts. They had condemned Kuomintang corruption at the same time.

In China, as in the Philippines and other Asiatic countries, the demand of the common people is for land. The Huk are giving leadership to the peasants to own their land because the government makes no move to liberalize land ownership.

In the meantime, the officialdom of the Quirino government and those who surround the president are busy lining their pockets. Whatever cash they can grab they grab. They are leeches, disloyal to the Filipino people, and are precipitating the downfall of the government they represent.
