Second Language Studies Student Receives Future Leaders Scholarship

Congratulations to Yuka Matsutani, a PhD candidate in Second Language Studies, who was awarded the 2018 International Writing Centers Association (IWCA) President's Future Leaders Scholarship. She is one of only four student leaders nationwide who received the prestigious award.

At the IWCA annual conference last October, Matsutani presented her paper, "Conversation Analysis as Replicable, Aggregable, and Data Supported Methodology: Grammar Assistance for Multilingual Writers at the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa Writing Center." Matsutani demonstrated how multilingual students benefit from the center's research and hands-on tutoring.

For the past year, Matsutani has worked closely with the Mānoa Writing Center under the directorship of Georganne Nordstrom. Having once thought that it would not be possible for a non-native speaker to become a consultant at the center, Matsutani learned that she could, indeed, play an indispensable role. She credits Nordstrom for understanding the value of multilingual consultants. "I am thrilled and grateful that the collaborative work I've been engaged in as a consultant was the reason I received this prestigious IWCA award," said Matsutani.

After earning her PhD, Matsutani hopes to establish more writing centers (with alliances to U.S. centers) at Japanese universities and to continue research on human interaction. Originally from Japan, she has lived on 'Oahu for nearly four years, during which time she has grown personally and professionally as a result of her center work. "The Mānoa Writing Center is the best thing that happened to me," she states. "I would not be who I am without being inspired by its hardworking consultants and student writers."
