Inspirational personal stories, in their own voices, from the Center for Oral History archive, about the lives of women who worked in the pineapple industry in the 30's through the 60's, and present day experiences of women in the hotel industry. Insights on why women went to work and their experience with striking.

This project is supported by a grant from the Hawai'i Council for the Humanities and partnership with Hawai'i Public Radio, Local 5, and the Department of Women's Studies at UHM.
