“Best Practices and Approaches for Family-Related Mediations... Divorce, Custody, Family, Guardianship, Special Education, and Beyond”

NOVEMBER 9, Noon – 1:15 p.m.

Nationally recognized mediator Nina Meierding will provide her insights and experience in mediating family-related matters from a broad perspective, including when to include extended family and the children. Nina will also share her thoughts on domestic violence, dealing with racism, and more.

Nina Meierding, a national leader in the field of conflict resolution, has mediated over 4,000 disputes and has trained thousands of people in almost all 50 states, as well as Canada, England, India, Ireland, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Scotland, and Sweden.

She was the Director and Senior Mediator at the Mediation Center in Ventura, California from 1985-2007, and is now a full-time trainer (Negotiation and Mediation Training Services), professor, and conflict resolution consultant. Nina has taught at the Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution at Pepperdine University School of Law for over 27 years, and also at Southern Methodist University for almost 20 years. She has been an instructor at the National Judicial College in Reno, Nevada, and the California Judicial College, and is a guest lecturer at universities throughout the United States.

Nina served as a special education mediator for the California State Department of Education and was the mediation partner and trainer for the Wisconsin Special Education System (WSEMS) from 2006 - 2017.

She is a former president of the Academy of Family Mediators and served on the Board of Directors of the Association of Conflict Resolution, the California Dispute Resolution Institute, and the Southern California Mediation Association, as well as on the Council for Distinguished Advisors at Pepperdine University and the Advisory Board at Southern Methodist University and many others.
