

Disability Studies in Action:

Practices in the Classroom and Beyond

Spring 2022

Monday, January 24
11:30 am–12:45 pm
Online Event

Faculty, lecturers, graduate students, and educators: Are you interested in questions around disability and diversity? Looking to expand or revise your curriculum, course materials, and assignments, but unsure where to begin or how to incorporate disability into your respective field? Join us for lunch at our first faculty roundtable, where Professors Brett Oppegaard, Emily West, and Raphael Raphael will discuss their practices and innovations for including disability in their course designs. They will offer concrete examples and recommendations that have helped students think more critically about disability. Faculty presentations may cover concrete assignments, useful readings and other course materials, or technological innovations.

This event is sponsored by the OFDAS Center for Teaching Excellence, and hosted by the Disability Studies Initiative (DSI).

MODERATED BY

Katharina Heyer
Professor, Political Science

PRESENTATIONS BY

Brett Oppegaard
Professor,
Communications

Emily West
Professor, English

Raphael Raphael
Professor, Center on Disability Studies

OFDAS Center for Teaching Excellence

P 808-956-6978
cte@hawaii.edu
www.cte.hawaii.edu

Register Online

www.cte.hawaii.edu/events.html

